message from the interim chair

Pamala Griset, Ph.D.
Interim Chair and Associate Professor

Thomas Alan Smilie

The Department of Criminal Justice and Legal Studies offers students an exciting and extremely relevant education. Our faculty and staff are very student-oriented. Although UCF is a big university, our students are given one-on-one attention and guidance. There is always someone available to talk to students and advise them academically and professionally.

The department is fortunate to have so many high-quality students, faculty, staff, alumni and community supporters. Our curriculum provides students with many choices. We offer over 150 separate course sections each semester, and new courses are added frequently to meet the evolving needs of the professional fields our students will enter upon graduation.

Students are provided with an abundance of learning options. Classes are taught on the Web, in mixed-media mode and in traditional face-to-face formats. Students can participate in a variety of certificate programs, internships, study abroad programs and research projects. The learning atmosphere is vibrant and the options available to students are virtually limitless.

Our alumni and student organizations are very active in the community and in our department. This makes the learning environment even richer.

The academic fields of criminal justice and legal studies provide our graduates with many opportunities for enjoyable and meaningful careers. Some will pursue careers as lawyers or enter the legal profession in another capacity; others will opt for careers in law enforcement or corrections. Some graduates will choose to pursue academic careers, and others may join research organizations.

This year, I am serving as the interim chair of the department while we conduct a national search for a permanent chair. We are looking for a chair with the vision and commitment needed to continually strive for excellence in education and to improve the quality of the legal and criminal justice systems at the local, national and global levels.

I am pleased to share this publication with you as a reflection of the success of our department, faculty, staff, students and alumni.

McCarthy Steps Down After 14 Years as Department Chair

Thomas Alan Smilie

The Department of Criminal Justice and Legal Studies bid farewell to its chair of 14 years, Professor Bernard McCarthy, at a party in held in Health and Public Affairs building I on July 26, 2006.

Members of the campus community gathered to recognize McCarthy's extensive contributions to the department. During his tenure as chair, McCarthy led the department through substantial growth in its students and faculty.

"Dr. McCarthy provided leadership to the department that resulted in major growth in program access to students at numerous campuses and through online instruction," remarked Joyce Dorner, interim dean of the college. "He also developed many partnerships that will continue to serve the community, students and department well into the future."

McCarthy is currently on leave from his position as professor of criminal justice at UCF. In August 2006, he joined the faculty of Missouri State University in Springfield as a visiting professor of criminology and director of the Center for Community and Social Issues.

Students and Campus Police Department Contribute to Hurricane Katrina Relief Drive

For a second year in a row, undergraduates in the “Careers in Criminal Justice” course participated in a hurricane-relief drive led by Adjunct Instructor Randall Mingo, who is also a UCF alumnus (M.P.A., '95; M.S., Criminal Justice '97) and assistant director of the UCF Police Department’s Patrol Division. The students focused their efforts on the community of Gulfport, Miss., which was devastated by Hurricane Katrina in late August 2005.

The students donated medical supplies, new clothing and canned foods, as well as 35 pints of blood, said Mingo. They also helped package more than 1,500 “Individual Handout” bags with supplies Mingo had collected and donated, including T-shirts and toiletry supplies such as toothpaste and razors.

UCF’s emergency response vehicle

Members of the UCFPD transported many of the students’ relief packages to Florida State University in Tallahassee in a trailer pulled by the department’s emergency response vehicle. The FSU Police Department subsequently took the supplies to the Gulfport area.

The remaining relief packages were transported directly to the devastated community in pick-up trucks driven by Robin Collins, a dispatcher with the UCFPD, and her husband, Mike Collins of the Orange County Sheriff’s Office. They delivered the packages to members of the Gulfport Police Department.

The couple learned that the GPD’s building had been completely destroyed, along with the majority of its vehicles, and that 30 of the department’s 168 sworn officers had lost everything. “They were most grateful for the entire effort to help them out,” the Collins wrote to Mingo.

Department Helps Kick Off Juvenile Probation Volunteer Program

The Department of Criminal Justice and Legal Studies joined with the Florida Department of Juvenile Justice to kick off a new Juvenile Probation Volunteer Program at an event held Nov. 18, 2005, on UCF's Orlando campus. The state department announced it was launching the program on a pilot basis in two judicial circuits, Circuit 5 (Marion County) and Circuit 9 (Orange County).

Speakers at the event described the program as a potentially valuable way to reduce juvenile crime. By engaging volunteers from the community, including university students, to work alongside professional juvenile probation officers, the program

- supplements the corps of full-time juvenile probation officers
- provides additional role models in the lives of delinquent youths
- and develops a corps of potential employees who are familiar with the work.

The program encourages students in an approved credit-earning internship with a Florida university or college, people interested in exploring career options and retirees with spare time to apply. Applicants must be 21 years old and able to pass a criminal background check.

All volunteers receive 36 hours of training, six of which are spent shadowing state juvenile probation officers.

Volunteer Coordinator Melanie Hinxman thinks the program is a great approach to recruiting new probation offers into the profession.

Thomas Alan Smith

Representatives from the department, state and community attended a kick-off event for the program in November 2005 at UCF's Orlando campus.

"It gives volunteers an opportunity to learn the nitty-gritty about doing the job," she explained. "They learn the challenges it entails as well as the positive rewards."

Hinxman said the first training was offered in January 2006 and several UCF students participated.

"Three of them have since been hired by at local facilities as a result of their volunteering," she added.

Cherie Goforth is now an intake juvenile probation officer at the Juvenile Assessment Center in Orlando. Lorena Ospino also obtained a position at the center. And Jesse Schrage has been hired as a juvenile probation officer at the Seminole County Juvenile Justice Center in Sanford, Fla.

Once hired, new probation officers attend a six-week academy for training, noted Hinxman.

Annual Career Fair Hosts More Than 60 Prospective Employers, 700 Students

More than 60 agencies and organizations participated in the 2006 Criminal Justice Career fair, held Feb. 22 in the Student Union on UCF's Orlando campus. The annual event provides students with an opportunity to speak directly with representatives from sheriff's offices, police departments, government organizations, military branches, corporations, academic institutions and other organizations with an interest in hiring UCF graduates.

The fair was jointly sponsored by the department and the UCF chapter of LAE, the national professional organization for criminal justice students.

Ross Wolf, assistant professor of criminal justice and faculty adviser to Lambda Alpha Epsilon, said more than 700 students attended the fair.

Russian Cadets Visit College

Ten cadets and four leaders from the Volgograd Law Academy in Volgograd (formerly Stalingrad), Russia, visited UCF Feb. 20-25, 2006, as part of an ongoing exchange between the academy and the Department of Criminal Justice and Legal Studies.

During their weeklong visit, the Russian contingent toured the Orlando campus, listened to presentations by faculty members about the U.S. criminal justice system (pictured above), attended the annual Criminal Justice Career Fair, met with ROTC cadets and leaders, met with a state attorney and public defender, and observed a mock trial put on by the Mock Trial Team at UCF.

Their off-campus activities included a visit to the Orange County Sheriff's Office, a tour of the county jail and "ride-alongs" with deputies.

Before heading to Disney World on Saturday, Feb. 25, the group met at the college to collect some 200 scarves knitted for Russian children through a project established by UCF's School of

Social Work. They delivered the scarves to the Volgograd Center for Youth Policy and Social Work, a local agency that works with area youth, street children, orphans and adolescent substance abusers.

The visitors returned to Volgograd on Feb. 27.

Department Develops Relationship with Turkish National Police

The Department of Criminal Justice and Legal Studies has cultivated a relationship with the Turkish National Police. In June 2005, Professor Bernard McCarthy and Instructor Robert Ford attended the Turkish National Police Conference in Istanbul, where they presented a paper on the impact of terrorism on tourism.

Also, Erhan Beyhan, Bahadir Kucukusal, and Serdar Yildiz, three officers on leave from the Turkish National Police, joined the UCF Doctoral program in Public Affairs, and the department sponsored them as graduate research assistants in 2005–2006.

Grant Helps Expand Scope of Study Abroad

Instructor Mary Ann Eastep received a grant from UCF's Office of the Special Assistant to the President for Global Perspectives to expand her "Crime and Justice in the Caribbean" course to other countries. The course was first offered during the spring 2005 term, with a spring-break trip to Barbados.

As a result of the grant, Eastep has developed a new course scheduled to be offered during the summer 2007 semester. The course, titled "Social Justice," is a service-learning study abroad course. Eastep will travel with the students to Nosara, Guanacaste, Costa Rica, where they will engage in service-learning projects, working in community agencies in Nosara. Through their service and their reflective activities, the students will make linkages between social policies, social justice and criminal justice.

The program in Nosara will last approximately one month, which according to Eastep should be enough time to give students a broad understanding of some of the growth and development issues impacting the small coastal area and how those issues impact both the indigenous peoples and the area's social institutions (particularly their system of justice).

Graduate Program News

- A former special-topics graduate course, American Criminal Courts, became a permanent course offering (CCJ 6205).
- Proposals for new graduate certificate programs in Homeland Security and Legal Studies were prepared and are under review by the university.
- Also proposed and under review is an online Master of Science in Criminal Justice program for out-of-state students. The program was developed jointly by the department and UCF's Office of Continuing Education.
- The department is working with UCF's Department of Forensic Science to develop courses for a new master's degree in digital forensic science.
- Faculty members continued to serve as mentors of graduate students in the interdisciplinary Doctoral Program in Public Affairs. Twenty-seven students in the program identified criminal justice as their area of specialty. Two students in the criminal justice area completed their doctoral degrees in 2006.

Seminars, 2005–2006

Seminars held during the 2005–2006 academic year offered students the opportunity to learn about contemporary topics in the criminal justice field from leading regional, national and international experts. The seminars, held on UCF's Orlando campus, could be taken for continuing education units or undergraduate or graduate course credit.

“Procedural Issues in the Use of Deadly Force and Cold Case Investigations,” a one-credit-hour seminar took place Sept. 17, 2005; the morning session covered legal, ethical and liability issues in police use of deadly force, and the afternoon session addressed the investigation of cold cases. David Rivers, a retired detective sergeant from the Homicide Bureau of the Metropolitan Dade Police Department, led the seminar. He has over 27 years of law enforcement experience and worked as a lead investigator and supervisor of several hundred homicides, suicides, accidental and other death investigations. In 1988, Rivers became supervisor of the Cold Case Squad; the squad was responsible for the continuing investigation of information received on over 1,800 open homicides dating back to 1951.

“Public Safety Leadership in the 21st Century,” a one-credit seminar, was held on Nov. 12, 2005 and led by Anthony Schembri, secretary of the Florida Department of Juvenile Justice and retired commissioner of the New York City Department of Corrections. Secretary Schembri also served as police commissioner for the City of Rye, N.Y. The seminar dealt with leadership issues for police and public safety personnel.

“Planning for Disaster,” a one-credit-hour seminar took place on May 26, 2006, presented in partnership with the Orange County Sheriff's Office and Sheriff Kevin Beary. Led by Gerald A. Cavis, a 20-year veteran recently retired from the

U.S. Secret Service, and David R. Williams, a senior special agent bomb technician who retired from the Federal Bureau of Investigation in 2003 after over 25 years of service, the seminar covered law enforcement response to disasters. Topics included the bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City, the attacks of 9/11, and the hurricanes that ravaged the United States in summer 2005. Cavis discussed the U.S. Secret Service's capabilities and missions, particularly how the agency responds to national disasters. Williams served as the principal FBI Laboratory Examiner in the bombing of the World Trade Center in New York City and the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City. He also worked the crime scene following the Pan Am Flight 103 bombing over Lockerbie, Scotland.

“Less Lethal Weapons: Benefits and Liabilities,” was offered on Feb. 4, 2006 and examined use of non-lethal force by the police. The seminar, led by guest lecturer Charles Mesloh (Ph.D., Public Affairs, '02), addressed the concepts of less-than-lethal weapons, factors that impact their use and how they affect the use of force by law enforcement officers. Students collaboratively created and defended a force continuum that encompassed how officers are able to apprehend violent offenders.

“Computer Crime and Cyber Terrorism: The New Threat,” a one-credit-hour seminar occurred on April 22, 2006. Guest lecturer Mark Henych, Ph.D., led the seminar on the use of computers and the Internet for an assortment of deviant and unethical behavior. This presentation examined the concepts of computer crime, computer security and Cyber Terrorism from theoretical as well as practical perspectives. Also discussed was the “new” criminal, the hacker, and the concept of cyber warfare wherein computers and the Internet function as facilitators for a cyber assault that may damage, or severely cripple, critical components of the United State's infrastructure.

Phase I Completed of Study on Police Use of Force Policy and Outcomes

Gene Paoline, assistant professor of criminal justice, said that he and research colleague William Terrill at Michigan State University have just completed the first phase of their National Institute of Justice–funded study, Assessing Police Use of Force Policy and Outcomes.

“We constructed and administered a mail survey to 1,083 police agencies (of varying size) across the United States. The survey queried police administrators regarding their specific force policy, as well as a host of other theoretically relevant organizational characteristics. From this first phase of survey respondents, we have selected eight agencies, with varying force policies, for in-depth site visits,” Paoline recently reported.

The second phase of the project is scheduled to start at the beginning of spring semester 2007. Paoline and Terrill will collect agency data (e.g., officer surveys, use of force reports, arrest records, and citizen complaint and civil litigation data) that will allow them to assess whether variations in force policies result in more beneficial outcomes for police agencies and officers.

“We're interested in learning if the given policy 1) provides officers guidance with respect to force decision-making, 2) leads to, or facilitates, the control of suspects, and 3) reduces the number of injuries, shootings, citizen complaints, and lawsuits levied for inappropriate force,” Paoline wrote.

FINDER Receives Homeland Security Award

The Florida Integrated Network for Data Exchange and Retrieval (FINDER), housed in UCF's Public Safety Technology Center under the direction of Associate Professor Mike Reynolds, continues to receive national attention. FINDER was awarded a 2005 Homeland Security Award, Information Sharing category, from the Christopher Columbus Fellowship Foundation on Oct. 10, 2005, in recognition of its contribution to an area of research that will result in “a significant and positive benefit to society.”

Honors and Awards, 2005–2006

Brandon Applegate, associate professor of criminal justice, has served as first vice president, Southern Criminal Justice Association, and will become the associations president next year. He was also program chair of the Southern Criminal Justice Association for its annual meeting.

Sue Craig, instructor of criminal justice, was chosen to represent the college as a 2006–2008 Faculty Center for Teaching and Learning faculty fellow.

Mary Ann Eastep, instructor and internship coordinator of criminal justice, was selected by her colleagues and the UCF Office of Service Learning to receive a Service-Learning Faculty Recognition Award for distinguished service and outstanding commitment to service learning at UCF. The award was presented on Service Learning Day, Oct. 25, 2005.

Eastep was chosen to represent the college as a 2006–2008 Faculty Center for Teaching and Learning faculty fellow.

David Fabianic, professor of criminal justice, was selected by his colleagues to receive a UCF Teaching Incentive Program Award in recognition of his outstanding teaching performance.

College Dean Belinda McCarthy received a Community Partnership Award on March 21, 2006, from the Orange County Citizens' Commission for Children in recognition of her "outstanding support and dedication" to the commission.

Members of the campus community attended a farewell reception for McCarthy on June 1, 2006. She had been dean of the college for the prior 16 years. McCarthy assumed a new position as the first provost of Missouri State University in July.

Abby Milton, instructor of legal studies, received the College of Health and Public Affairs Undergraduate Teacher of the Year Award.

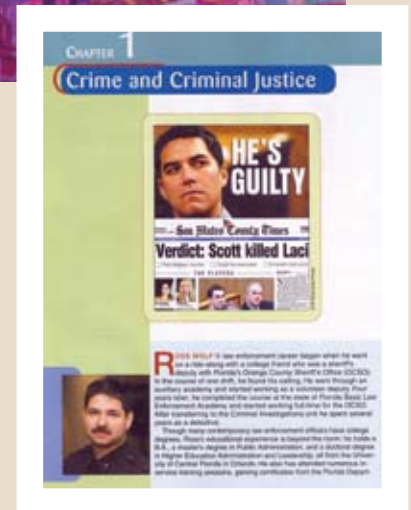

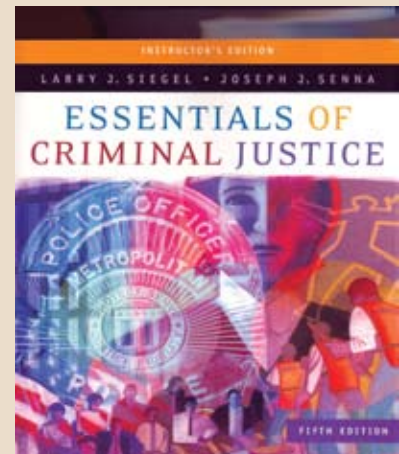

Eugene Paoline, assistant professor of criminal justice, was selected by his colleagues to receive a UCF Teaching Incentive Program Award in recognition of his outstanding teaching performance.

Lee Ross, associate professor of criminal justice, served as a senior faculty fellow in the UCF Office of the Provost and Executive Vice President.

Ross also served as a peer reviewer for the Department of Homeland Security's fiscal-year 2005 Commercial Equipment Direct Assistance Program.

Ross Wolf, assistant professor of criminal justice, was recognized by the college with an Unsung Hero Award for his service to the university during the days following the shooting of UCF Police Department officer Mario Jenkins.

In February 2006, Wolf received the annual Leadership Week Faculty Award from the UCF Lead Scholars program.

A Textbook Career. Assistant Professor Ross Wolf's career in academics and law enforcement is highlighted in chapter one of the latest edition of Essentials of Criminal Justice (5th edition). The textbook was written by Larry Siegel and Joseph Senna for introductory criminal justice students. Wolf's profile provides examples of career prospects in criminal justice.

Louis Mark Landau, B.A. in criminal justice, is vice president of group purchasing for the Western North Carolina Health Network in Asheville, N.C. He resides in Waynesville, N.C.

Candice "Candy" Crawford, B.A. in criminal justice, Florida's assistant secretary of state/chief of staff (under Secretary of State Glenda Hood), joined Winter Park, Fla., marketing communications firm Pecora and Blexrud in September 2005.

Michael A. Daigle, B.A. in criminal justice, is currently a supervisory special agent with the U.S. Department of Homeland Security—U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement, known as ICE (formerly the U.S. Customs Service). He is a program manager at the ICE Academy, located at the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center in Glynco, Ga. He is assigned to the Office of Professional Responsibility Training Division and oversees all basic training programs for ICE special agents assigned to conduct internal affairs investigations in the ICE Office of Professional Responsibility.

In 2003, with the creation of the Department of Homeland Security, the U.S. Customs Service was transferred from the U.S. Treasury Department to the DHS and renamed U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement. Prior to Daigle's assignment to the ICE Academy, he held various positions within the U.S. Customs Service, including senior special agent, Office of Internal Affairs in Miami, Fla.; senior special agent,

Office of Investigations in Cocoa Beach, Fla.; senior special agent, Office of Investigations in Lake Charles, La.; special agent, Office of Investigations, St. Louis, Mo.; and special agent, Office of Investigations, Ft. Pierce, Fla.

Additionally, Daigle recently retired from the U.S. Navy Reserve at the rank of lieutenant commander. Prior to his retirement, he was a reserve special agent with the Naval Criminal Investigative Service. Following the terrorist attacks of 9/11, Daigle was recalled to active duty and assigned to the National Security Squad of the Joint Terrorism Task Force, investigating the terrorist links of the 9/11 hijackers.

Patrick A. Areopagita, B.A. in criminal justice, is law enforcement officer for the City of Orlando, Fla. He resides in Casselberry, Fla.

Kathy M. Deane (Leatherwood), B.S. in criminal justice, works as a city carrier for the U.S. Postal Service in Cocoa, Fla. She and her husband, Robert, welcomed baby Hayden Thomas Deane on Dec. 3, 2005. She and her family reside in Cocoa, Fla.

Michael Miller, B.A. in criminal justice, B.A. in legal studies, M.S. in criminal justice ('99), is a subcontract manager for the Harris Corporation in Palm Bay, Fla. He resides in Rockledge, Fla.

Paul Anthony Padilla, B.S. in criminal justice, works as a receivables management manager for Cingular Wireless in Orlando. He is married with children, and he and his family reside in Orlando. He earned his M.B.A. from the University of Phoenix. He has traveled a lot since graduating from UCF and is very involved in his church.

Lyle Agins, B.S. in criminal justice, has been employed with the Monroe County Sherrif's Office, in Tavernier, Fla., for five years. He spent four years as a patrol officer, and he is currently a detective assigned to the Criminal Investigations Unit — District III. He investigates property felony crimes, violent felony crimes and economic crimes. His unit has seen a sharp increase in economic crimes, more specifically identity theft and fraud-related crimes perpetrated via the Internet. Agins finds the economic crimes especially challenging, which is one reason he truly enjoys working on those types of cases. He has been forced to learn a great deal about the Internet and computers to aid him in investigating those types of crimes.

Richard Brimer, B.S. in criminal justice, serves as an instructor pilot for the U.S. Air Force and is stationed at Columbus Air Force Base in Mississippi. Previously, he was the squadron scheduler for the 41st Flying Training Squadron, which involved him controlling the daily schedule of flights, simulators, academics and sorties. He has also scheduled and coordinated over 60 air shows. As an instructor pilot, he has educated and mentored many pilots and was awarded “Best Instructor Pilot” twice in recognition of his contributions. Rich has earned a number of awards during his service, including the Global War on Terrorism Medal, for active duty since Sept. 11, 2001; National Defense Service Medal, for active duty since Sept. 11, 2001; Air Force Longevity Service Award, for active duty beyond four years; Air Force Commendation Medal, for meritorious service in various assignments; and Air Force Outstanding Unit Award (four times), for recognition as being one of the best squadrons. While in training, he earned the Top Gun in Navigation and Low Level Flying and the Military Training Award.

Jesus M. Chevere, B.A. in legal studies, B.A. in psychology, earned a Master of Arts in Forensic Psychology from Marymount University in Arlington, Va., in December 2005. He has been an intelligence analyst with the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Washington, D.C., since 1999. He currently lives in Alexandria, Va. with his long-time partner, Alan.

Steven Collins, B.S. in criminal justice, J.D. (Stetson College of Law, '02), joined the U.S. Army Judge Advocate General's Corps in November 2002 and has served as criminal prosecutor since May 2003. He served at Fort Benning, Ga., and Fort McPherson, Ga. Collins was deployed overseas in March 2006.

James P. Rhyne, B.S. in criminal justice, M.S. in criminal justice ('04), known as Jim “Bubba” Rhyne, retired with the rank of lieutenant in 2004 from the Florida Highway Patrol after more than 26 years of service. He serves currently as a reserve trooper with FHP. Lt. Rhyne was one of the original FHP Security Attaché state troopers assigned to the UCF football team in 1998. Jim served as the first chairman of the International Union of Police Associations Florida Local 6000, AFL-CIO, which represents Florida's state law enforcement officers in collective bargaining. He continues to serve as chairman emeritus and business agent with IUPA. Jim is an assistant professor in the Undergraduate School of Criminal Justice with Kaplan University in Chicago. He is also an adjunct instructor in criminal justice with UCF in Cocoa, Fla. Jim has served as an adjunct faculty member for Mountain State University in Beckley, W.Va., and Webster University's graduate school in Merritt Island, Fla.

In Jim's spare time, he is an appointed member of the City of Titusville Municipal Code Enforcement Board. Jim and his wife, Deborah Rhyne (Woodward) (B.A. in criminal justice in '74, M.A. in elementary education '88, and Ed.D. in curriculum and development in '98), enjoy motorcycling, three very spoiled miniature schnauzers, and their three daughters and two granddaughters. They live in Titusville, Fla., and actively lay claim to being UCF football's biggest fans, with the tattoos to prove it.

Erin Brennan Chambers, B.S. in legal studies, and Wayne Patrick Chambers were married on Jan. 14, 2006, at the Cathedral of the Incarnation in College Park, Fla. Erin serves as executive director for Florida Lawyers Support Services, Inc., and Florida Legal Education Association in Orlando, Fla. She and her husband reside in Casselberry, Fla.

Sara Holladay-Tobias, B.S. in legal studies, attended law school at the University of Florida. She graduated in May 2006 and took the bar exam in July. Starting in July 2006, she serves as an associate at McGuire Woods, LLP, in Jacksonville, Fla. She resides in Jacksonville, Fla.

Daniel J. Meyers, B.S. in criminal justice, was commissioned as a second lieutenant in the United States Marine Corps following graduation in December 2005. In April 2006 he reported to base in Quantico, Va. He hopes to act as an ambassador for UCF's criminal justice program while serving his country.

Cherie Goforth, B.S. in criminal justice, is an intake juvenile probation officer at the Juvenile Assessment Center. She recently traveled to the state capital to meet Governor Jeb Bush and the secretary and assistant secretary of the Department of Juvenile Justice.

alumni club

The UCF Criminal Justice and Legal Studies Alumni Club Becomes a Chapter

The UCF Criminal Justice and Legal Studies Alumni Club officially became a chapter this year, creating new by-laws and setting new goals for the future. The purpose of the chapter will remain to serve the professional networking, fellowship and continuing education needs of the department's alumni as well as to provide multiple levels of support for the department.

Membership in the Criminal Justice and Legal Studies Alumni Chapter is automatic with your UCF Alumni Association membership. Besides gaining access to continuing education, networking, professional fellowship opportunities and events, member benefits include career services, numerous discounts a subscription to Pegasus (UCF's alumni magazine) and much more. Individual annual dues are only $35. Visit www.ucfalumni.com or call 407-UCF-ALUM to join today.

2005–2006 Accomplishments

In the past year, the chapter continued adding to its annual of events and activities. Chapter members participated in a number of events, and the following is partial list of those events:

- Tailgating at home football games with other alumni chapters/clubs
- Lighthouse Central Florida Sight and Sole Walk-a-Thon
- Fall social and networking event at Rhythm and Flow lounge
- Halloween haunted house
- Holiday party
- Public safety seminar
- FAIRWINDS Alumni Center Open House

In the coming year, the chapter will add to its calendar of events an annual symposium on current issues in criminal justice and legal studies and a résumé workshop for students.

The Gould Family Library of Criminal Justice and Legal Studies

The UCF Library now houses an extensive book collection, occupying four long shelves, that focuses on the study of law throughout all 50 states. The collection, designated The Gould Family Library of Criminal Justice and Legal Studies, is a gift from Norman, Jean, Jeffrey and Bruce Gould.

For more than 50 years, Jean and Norman Gould operated Gould Publications as a leading publisher of compendiums of local and state laws and handbooks used by courts, lawyers and law enforcement agencies across the nation. During the most recent 20-some years, Gould Publications was located in Longwood, Fla. Jean and Norman sold their company to Lexis Nexis in December 2004.
