AREAS OF RESEARCH AND CURRENT PROJECTS

Areas of Research

1. Access to Psychosocial Care in Health Care Settings
  - Primary Care Settings
  - Oncology Settings
2. Health Professions' Training to Improve Psychosocial Care Delivery
3. Quality of Life for Cancer Survivors

Current Projects

1. Unmet Needs of Cancer Survivors: An Analysis of Qualitative Data from the American Cancer Society's (ACS) Study of Cancer Survivors. This is a collaboration with Kevin Stein, PhD, Managing Director of the ACS Behavioral Research Center, National Home Office, Atlanta, GA,

Gail Adorno, DSW, University of Texas, Arlington TX, Ellen Lopez, DPH, University of Alaska, Fairbanks AK, and Victoria Loerzel, PhD, RN, OCN, UCF College of Nursing. I am the primary author on the first of a series of manuscripts exploring themes and trends in unmet needs of cancer survivors. This study uses data from the ACS Study of Cancer Survivors, a population-based cross-sectional study that enrolled a cohort of nearly 10,000 cancer survivors who were 2, 5 or 10-years post-diagnosis who were randomly selected from cancer registries in 14 states in the U.S. The survey aims to investigate the influence of behavioral, psychosocial treatment, and support factors on the quality of life and health behaviors of cancer survivors. This set of collaborative manuscripts will analyze responses to several open-ended survey questions about survivors' current and past unmet needs and what types of support services would have been most helpful during their cancer experience.
