	UPDATE Drs. Bryer and Kapucu invited to Minnowbrook III
Monday	The first Minnowbrook Conference was held in 1968 and organized by an icon of public administration, Dwight Waldo, who used funds supplied as part of a "super-professorship" paid for by New York state. Waldo limited participation to people under age 35 with the purpose of the conference being to redefine public administration theory in the context of the social upheaval happening at that time. The result was New Public
Tuesday	Administration, which focused on social equity and change in addressing social issues. Now the Maxwell Schools' Minnowbrook III Conference committee has invited Dr. Bryer to participate as a rising star in public administration and Dr. Kapucu to present his paper on the "Next
Wednesday	Generation of Network Studies." The conference is being held September 5-7 in upstate New York. Congratulations to both!
